Eiffage, through its subsidiary Eiffage Construction, recently signed the contract to design, build and maintain the Cancer and Imaging Institute on the Regional University Hospital Centre's Cavale Blanche site for an amount of €57 million.

This new building will accommodate radiotherapy, oncology, haematology, imaging and nuclear medicine services in a single location. Teams from Eiffage Construction will build this complex new five-storey, 29,700 m² hospital unit in partnership with the architects Groupe 6.

Teams from Eiffage Énergie Systèmes will ensure comprehensive maintenance of the facility for five years.

The project aims to bring together related care and research skills and expertise in a single technical facility, and to strengthen cancer care in western Brittany. It also aims to offer a high-quality experience and excellent care to patients and visitors, and to improve working conditions for hospital staff.
