Press release

Eiffage unites all its deconstruction businesses under the Demcy brand

Eiffage, through its subsidiary Eiffage Génie Civil, is launching the Demcy brand, which unites from now all the Group's deconstruction and waste recovery activities: dredging, asbestos and lead removal, dismantling, demolition, and recycling.

This new brand combines the know-how of three historical brands acquired by Eiffage Génie Civil over the years: Perez & Morelli, Boutté, and Chastagner.

The 270 employees united in the new brand under Bruno Cahen's leadership are able to operate anywhere in France, from one of the seven agencies spread over all the whole territory. Their expertise covers all types of projects, from design studies and digital modelling to construction on both vacant and occupied sites.

In 2020, these teams worked on almost 150 deconstruction sites. Selective removal and on-site waste sorting on these projects enabled the recovery, reuse or recycling of 500,000 tonnes of materials and equipment.

Demcy is committed to the Eiffage Group's policy of reducing greenhouse gas emissions through redevelopment projects of cities and territories, offering materials and equipment reuse solutions to enable major resource savings. Demcy contributes to developing the circular economy and reducing the carbon footprints of its customers' projects, and promotes the "zero net artificialisation" objective.

Demcy is currently working on projects to deconstruct the Ford plant at Blanquefort, the former "Française de Mécanique" workshops in Douvrin, Mounier high school in Grenoble, and the Allée des Dômes apartment block in Clermont-Ferrand, with work also beginning shortly on Baumettes prison in Marseille.
